Methods and Apparatus for Lowering Intracranial and Intraspinal Cord Pressure

Inventors: Tom Jennings, David Gillis

Description:
Apparatus and methods are provided for applying negative pressure to tissues of a patient that are transmitted to the vertebral venous system of the patient and thereby lowering intracranial pressure. Intracranial pressure is thus lowered easily without increasing the work of breathing, without needing to be intubated, and without breathing through a valve in patients with elevated increased intracranial pressure.

Patent Status: Patent Pending

Contact:
Sundeep Mattamana, Ph.D.
Associate Director
Office of Technology Transfer
(409) 772-0374
sumattam@utmb.edu