Jumping between Open Window Applications

If you are working on multiple applications, you can easily jump between them by clicking on a taskbar button to activate the corresponding program. However, the icons can be small, and the button captions are often truncated into gibberish.

Another method is to press Alt-Tab (Tab again, Tab again) repeatedly to cycle through larger icons representing open programs—allows you to choose the specific program you want to jump to. When the program you desire is in the designated box, release the Alt key and you will be in the program you just chose.

Pressing Shift-Alt-Tab (Tab, Tab, etc) cycles the other way.
